A word from Mr Thompson

A sombre tone to the end of our first full week in school. As Buckingham Palace announced the death of Her Majesty The Queen it was a huge jolt to one and all. As we will now enter a period of national mourning Wellow will continue to support all our community. School will continue as normal, as we await further guidance before communicating further with you during this period of mourning.

It is with great respect that we recognise the dedication and commitment of Queen Elizabeth II during her reign. Throughout her life, the Queen demonstrated a keen interest in and support for education both in the UK and around the world and valued the contribution of those working to support the development of young minds.

As we reflect on the role she played in public life, and think of her family and the many people whose lives she touched, we will continue to encourage our children to confront and debate the issues facing us. Open discussion and sharing of ideas will lead to the best hope of foreseeing future challenges, and solutions, in our rapidly changing world.

Wellow House sends its most sincere condolences to the Royal Family at this deeply sad time.

Warm regards,

Mr Thompson

Hard work has begun throughout the school!

A quick fact we noticed this week...
Mr Bardsley and Mrs Buck- both 20 years
at Wellow- still going strong!
Congratulations to both on this milestone.

Final Notices

- Thank you for returning your updated contact forms. These ensure we have the most recent information about your children, which in turn, helps the welfare of each child.
- Please ensure that any child who has to leave early or has an appointment during the day that they are signed out (and subsequently signed back in again when necessary). This ensures we know who is in school at any given time. Thank you for your cooperation.
